BRITISH READY TO GUARD SHIPS IN SPANISH AREA

VON RIBBENTROP ACTIVE

German Aide Visits Prime Minister For Confab

LONDON, Nov. 23.—(UP)—Great Britain has decided to provide warship protection for its merchantmen in the Mediterranean and to warn the Spanish nationalists that any interference with British ships will be met with forcible resistance.

It was rumored that, at a cabinet meeting at which the decision was reached, ministers were given an admiralty report that Italian or German submarines attacked Spanish loyalist warships at Cartagena, on the Mediterranean coast, yesterday.

The government, it was learned, received advices from usually trustworthy sources that a German submarine had been sighted.

ITALIANS SILENT

ROME, Nov. 23.—(UP)—Officials refused today to deny or confirm whether there were Italian submarines in Spanish waters. An official communique of the Spanish government asserted its fleet at Cartagena had been attacked by "foreign" submarines.

CRY OF INFANT LEADS TO BODY OF DEAD WOMAN

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., Nov. 23.—(UP)—The paved highway that rescued this "cracker" town from its backwoods obscurity, brought it a strange and mysterious tragedy today.

An unknown woman whose home may be any place in the United States had been found slain. Her 18-months old baby whose bright eyes and little brain probably recorded her last moments, who saw, touched, and perhaps knew her slayer, was, of course, incapable of providing any answer.

Sam Williams, a country negro, was ambuling along the highway 11 miles from here yesterday morning, on his way to Sunday school. He passed the lonely swamp and from it heard a baby crying. He penetrated about 40 feet through the dense underbrush, and there, prone on her back, her hair caked with blood, was a dead woman. Clutching at her breast and arms, obviously trying to arouse her, red-eyed and exhausted from hours of crying, was a blood haired, blue-eyed toddler.

A few minutes later Sam panted into a farm house where Sheriff W. J. Sattledge was summoned from Bainbridge. The baby boy, whose rompers and pull-over sweater were clean and neat, still was pulling at the body and whimpering as Sam had first seen him. A deputy took him to Bainbridge while Sattledge and the coroner examined the body.

SARGO'S FOES FIXED AT FOUR IN HONOR DUEL

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Nov. 23.—(UP)—Dr. Franz Sargo, who is no "gentleman" in the eyes of his wife's wealthy, aristocratic family, will try to kill four men today "in defense of her honor."

Even the tearful announcement that the 20-year-old debutante, the toast of Budapest who rejected half a hundred fashionable suitors to elope last January with Sargo, "an ordinary writer," is an expectant mother, failed to shake his determination to go through with his duels.

Originally 13 affairs of honor were scheduled but amicable settlements, after apologies, when Sargo took offense at being called a "Gigolo" and insinuations that he had married for money, reduced the number to four.

Two of those he will fight today are employers of the Hungarian National bank of which the managing director is Bela Schober, multi-millionaire grandfather of Mrs. Sargo—a man who lives so regally that in his own home a butler announces even the immediate members of his own family when they come into his presence. He is Sargo's implacable enemy.

The other two are state employees. Heavy cavalry sabres were chosen by Sargo's opponents, all young men, when he challenged them. He is 30.

SLIDE BURIES ALASKAN CITY

At Least One Known Dead, Many Injured As Juneau Is Struck by Mud and Rock

JUNEAU, Alaska, Nov. 23.—(UP)—An avalanche of mud and rock which swept down the side of Mt. Roberts and into Juneau last night caused at least one death, injured nine and caused heavy property damage. Firemen dug through the muck today searching for other possible victims.

The avalanche was caused by torrential rains which have fallen for 24 hours. High up on the side of Mt. Roberts the slide started and it crashed down, gaining and swept along.

Four May Be Buried

The roar of the approaching momentum, trees were uprooted slide could be heard and natives who had experienced lesser slides in former years ran for safety. Two apartment houses virtually were buried under the mud. At a street intersection where four persons had been standing at 7:50 o'clock—a minute before the slide hit the town—The muck was piled 20 feet high and covered an area of a 100 square feet. Whether the four escaped was not known.

Mrs. Gust Erickson, a negro, was killed when her home was crushed. Her husband, reported killed, later was found seriously injured. With him at the hospital were Alfred Bates, a Mrs. Justin, Mr. and Mrs. Parsons and their two children, a man named Mickey and a Mrs. Lott, a negro. In the confusion it was impossible to learn the victims' full names.

Light, Power Off

Light and power lines were broken and firemen, police and volunteers worked with the aid of car lights and improvised flares. Some victims, trapped in the wreckage of their demolished homes, were rescued after firemen cut through the debris with axes. The town was in darkness all night.

The mud and ooze was almost liquid and trapped victims were in danger of being choked. The force of the slide finally was halted by a large warehouse.

COURT DIVIDED OVER LEGALITY OF NEW YORK ACT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—(UP)—The Supreme court, by virtue of an evenly divided court, today affirmed the decision of the New York State Court of Appeals upholding state unemployment insurance legislation.

The court was divided four to four. Justice Harlan F. Stone being too ill to participate in the decision.

NAZI ENGINEER CONDEMNED FOR SABOTAGE ACTS

Hitler's Ambassador Goes to Moscow's Embassy to File Protest

NEWSPAPERS ANGERED

Another German Arrested With Factory Plans

BERLIN, Nov. 23.—(UP)—German newspapers, under government control, angrily denounced Russia today while the cabinet awaited the reply to a vigorous protest made by the embassy at Moscow against the death sentences given a German engineer, sabotage.

Count Friedrich Von Der Schulenburg, German ambassador to Russia, in his protest to the Russian foreign office called the charges against Sticking "incredible," and the tone of the newspapers indicated a similar attitude.

Schulenburg, it was announced, demanded that as a first step a pardon be granted Sticking at once, preliminary to his complete vindication of charges which Russia asserted he admitted.

One Newspaper Quoted

The newspaper Der Montag was typical, in its comment, of the inspired attitude taken by the press:

"It is an unprecedented international scandal. Moscow is trying to cause unrest in the entire European situation. The German ambassador has behind him the whole German nation, which can not tolerate that its citizens shall be victims of the worst kind of partisan justice. Russia is trying to make others responsible for the fiasco of its economic system."

The death sentence against Sticking removed attention from another serious Russo-German situation—the arrest at Kharkov of Hans Wicklein, a German charged with possessing plans of a factory where cannon are manufactured. Germany has twice demanded his release.

"Planting" Charged

The German story is that Wicklein was handed the plans by a Russian friend and that 15 minutes later a Russian secret police agent arrested him. Wicklein surrendered the papers, it is asserted, but the agent then searched his home and found other cannon factory plans. Wicklein, it is said, insists that the papers were planted.

Mrs. Gust Erickson, a negro, was killed when her home was crushed. Her husband, reported killed, later was found seriously injured. With him at the hospital were Alfred Bates, a Mrs. Justin, Mr. and Mrs. Parsons and their two children, a man named Mickey and a Mrs. Lott, a negro. In the confusion it was impossible to learn the victims' full names.

Light, Power Off

Light and power lines were broken and firemen, police and volunteers worked with the aid of car lights and improvised flares. Some victims, trapped in the wreckage of their demolished homes, were rescued after firemen cut through the debris with axes. The town was in darkness all night.

The mud and ooze was almost liquid and trapped victims were in danger of being choked. The force of the slide finally was halted by a large warehouse.

COURT DIVIDED OVER LEGALITY OF NEW YORK ACT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—(UP)—The Supreme Court, by virtue of an evenly divided court, today affirmed the decision of the New York State Court of Appeals upholding state unemployment insurance legislation.

The New York state act is generally similar to state legislation required under the new federal Social Security act.

The court was divided four to four, Justice Harlan F. Stone being too ill to participate in the decision.

Because of Stone's liberal tendencies it was believed almost certain that the New York law will ultimately be upheld by a majority opinion if new cases are brought before there is any change in the present personnel of the court.

Deputy Sheriff Miller Fissell said Skaggs' car collided with the parked auto of Edward Trego, Commercial Point. The brakes on Skaggs' car are alleged to have been faulty.

NAZI ENGINEER CONDEMNED FOR SABOTAGE ACTS

Hitler's Ambassador Goes to Moscow's Embassy to File Protest

NEWSPAPERS ANGERED

Another German Arrested With Factory Plans

BERLIN, Nov. 23—(UP)—German newspapers, under government control, angrily denounced Russia today while the cabinet awaited the reply to a vigorous protest made by the embassy at Moscow against the death sentences given a German engineer, sabotage.

Count Friedrich Von Der Schulenburg, German ambassador to Russia, in his protest to the Russian foreign office called the charges against Sticking "incredible," and the tone of the newspapers indicated a similar attitude.

Schulenburg, it was announced, demanded that as a first step a pardon be granted Sticking at once, preliminary to his complete vindication of charges which Russia asserted he admitted.

One Newspaper Quoted

The newspaper Der Montag was typical, in its comment, of the inspired attitude taken by the press:

"It is an unprecedented international scandal. Moscow is trying to cause unrest in the entire European situation. The German ambassador has behind him the whole German nation, which can not tolerate that its citizens shall be victims of the worst kind of partisan justice. Russia is trying to make others responsible for the fiasco of its economic system."

The death sentence against Sticking removed attention from another serious Russo-German situation—the arrest at Kharkov of Hans Wicklein, a German charged with possessing plans of a factory where cannon are manufactured. Germany has twice demanded his release.

"Planting" Charged

The German story is that Wicklein was handed the plans by a Russian friend and that 15 minutes later a Russian secret police agent arrested him. Wicklein surrendered the papers, it is asserted, but the agent then searched his home and found other cannon factory plans. Wicklein, it is said, insists that the papers were planted.

BRITAIN BUILDS NAVY DEFENSE FOR AIR RAIDS

Army to Form Secondary Line in Event of Emergency

LONDON, Nov. 23 (UP)—Defense officials today reviewed with satisfaction firing reports of anti-aircraft ship batteries against pilotless radio controlled airplanes.

Fully aware of Britain's vulnerability from aerial attack, the nation's defense program aims to assure maximum protection from sky raids. Simultaneously a powerful bombing force is being developed to retaliate fully should any Continental power wage a war of aggression on Britain.

Geographically it is possible to invade Britain only from the sea or air. For this reason the navy and air force are being expanded rapidly and closely co-ordinated. To support these two main military arms an entirely mechanized army, featuring tanks, chemical units and rapid-fire mounted artillery, is being created.

Army Secondary Arm

The army in case of attempted invasion would form a secondary line of defense at ports and against air raids.

British army officials want their entire force and equipment to move at speeds approaching 50 miles an hour. Such speeds would afford maximum concentrations at danger points due to the smallness of the British Isles. Roads abound in all parts of the country. Recent naval exercises revealed that increased attention is being paid to anti-aircraft firing. The radio controlled pilotless planes have been sent aloft for three hours at a time flying between 85 and 100 miles an hour at heights up to 10,000 feet.

Use De Havilland Planes

British authorities believe no other country has developed pilotless planes to the same level of efficiency as their own. Planes used are light de Havilland "Queen Bees." They are powered by a four-cylinder air-cooled engine of 130 horse power. Made of wood, the Queen Bee will float if brought down on the water by gunfire.

The planes have two cockpits, one of which is open and can be fitted rapidly with flying controls for use by a human pilot. In the other, closed, cockpit is the secret mechanism which guides the machine on its course and controls the engine throttle in obedience to radio signals sent from a ship or a ground battery.

Control Area 10 Miles

Radius of controlled pilotless flight is about 10 miles from the operating center.

The old aircraft carrier Argus is undergoing alterations to convert her into a mother ship for the robot planes which are launched by catapult.

The Argus will carry 8 to 12 of the pilotless planes. Special gear to salvage planes and radio control apparatus to guide them also will be carried.

A service to my bonnie lassie.
The boat rocks at the pier o'Leith,

The ship rules by the Berwick-law,
And I maun leave my bonnie Mary.

The Trumpets sound, the banners fly,
The glittering spears are ranked ready;
The shouts o'war are heard afar,
The battle closes thick and bloody;
But it's no the road o'sea or shore

RAILROAD ACTS TO BENEFIT ITS BUSINESS AREA

Pointing to advertising as a tremendous force in the development of commerce and business, the Norfolk and Western Railway said in a statement today, that the N. & W. not only advertises its transportation services, but advertises the territory it services.

During a year, the statement declares, the Norfolk and Western issues more than a million pieces of advertising literature, "most of which tells the story of the territory's industrial possibilities, recreational facilities and climatic advantages, throughout the United States and in many foreign countries."

The railroad revealed that it buys an average of 52,000 column inches in newspapers on the line and purchases approximately 150 pages of space in nationally circulated trade and business magazines annually. A large part of this space, the N. & W. points out, "is used to advertise the products made grown or mined in the railway's territory."

The statement continues: "In addition, the Norfolk and Western answers hundreds of miscellaneous requests for information and sends out thousands of photographs, news stories, feature articles, histories, etc.—descriptive of the N. & W. and the communities it serves to newspapers, magazines, libraries, civic clubs and individuals in every section of the United States and in foreign countries."

Expressing faith "in the continued progress of the territory it traverses," the railways conclude with the assertion, "the nation's railroads lead all other transportation agencies in volume of advertising—and advertising that builds communities and community business. They have increased their advertising appropriations and are sending millions of dollars in a consistent program to increase business and speed up recovery."

SINGING STARS DOMINATE AIR WAVES TONIGHT

Jane Froman, Jackie Heller to Sing in Broadcasts

Two singing stars and the chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will dominate tonight's airwaves. Jane Froman, one of the best, will appear with Richard Himber and his orchestra over NBC at 9:30; at 10:15 p. m., NBC, a special farewell program will be tendered Jackie Heller, who sails for England on Thanksgiving day; at 10:30 p. m., NBC, Jesse Jones, will speak on the National Radio Forum.

Lovers of sweet music will have a chance to hear the Brahms quartet Tuesday at 3:30 p. m. when the Elizabeth Sprague Foundation presents another in a series over CBS.

CROSBY HAS STARS

Bing Crosby has lined up an all-star Thanksgiving show for next Thursday night, Nov. 26, in the Music Hall. Guest stars include Rochelle Hudson, young star of the movies, Ricardo Cortez, film actor, and Lotte Lehmann, Metropolitan Opera soprano.

Cortez and Miss Hudson will be featured in two of the Music Hall's famous human interest interviews with Crosby, the master of ceremonies, with Bob Burns stepping in here and there to add zip to the conversation.

Although Miss Hudson is one of Hollywood's youngest actresses, she has been co-starred with some of the greatest names in films, including the late Will Rogers, Irvin S. Cobb, Wallace Beery, Frederic March, Shirley Temple, Claudette Colbert and W. C. Fields. Other of her hits include "Way Down East," "The Mighty Barnum," "Les Miserables," "Curly Top," "Show Them No Mercy," and "Everybody's Old Man."

Movie gangster, society crook, detective, playboy, Ricardo Cortez has played a variety of roles on both stage and screen. Listeners have heard him several times as a radio dramatic actor, but this is his first informal interview in the Kraft Music Hall.

Mme. Lehmann comes back to the hall for a second appearance. Crosby took advantage of the fact that she was in Hollywood and signed her for the Thanksgiving show.

Archaeologists digging at the Forum of Minturnae, Italy, found burned ruins of a temple and shops and coins dating up to 191 B. C., thus verifying the statement by Livy that lightning struck the Forum in 191.

THREE MAJOR PROJECTS PUT OHIO AMONG LEADERS IN LAND USE PROGRAM

EROSION OF SOIL FOUGHT BY U.S. IN 44 STATES

5,000 Acres Listed in One Program in Southeastern Part of State

ALL LAND UNDER OPTION

Division of Forestry Sponsors Zaleski, Ross-Hocking Jobs

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 23 — Ohio is one of 44 states in which the federal government is pushing developments on a huge land use program for which 9,000,000 acres of non-agricultural land already are under option.

This statement was made here today by L. E. Sawyer, in charge of land use activities for the Resettlement Administration in five states.

Ohio is identified with the nation-wide land use program through three agricultural demonstration projects. These include: Zaleski forest project, McArthur; Ross-Hocking forest projects, Chillicothe; and Southeastern Ohio Development project, Zanesville.

Will Include 35,300

Altogether these projects will include about 35,300 acres when land acquisition is complete. All of the needed land now is under option and latest reports show that approximately 10,000 acres already have been purchased.

Sponsored by the Soil Conservation Service, the southeastern Ohio project embraces some 5,000 acres. Developments in progress are aimed mainly at halting soil erosion damage and conserving water through construction of terraces, check dams and diversion ditches and planting of trees. A dam now being constructed will create a lake of some 18 acres.

Both the Zaleski and Ross-Hocking projects were sponsored by the Ohio division of forestry. The Zaleski area includes improved, new trees, planted, dams built and the area developed with the idea of increasing future timber production. Attention also is being given to increasing wild life and promoting water conservation. A lake covering 120 acres is being constructed.

Similar developments are in progress on the Ross-Hocking project which includes some 14,000 acres. As one phase in the water conservation program, a dam is being built which will impound about 16 acres of water. It is expected that both projects will be administered by the Ohio Division of Forestry when completed.

Much Under Option

Altogether, approximately 115,000 acres of non-agricultural land now are under option in connection with the land use program in Iowa, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. In addition, the Resettlement Administration has assisted in optioning some 40,000 acres of such land in the region for recreational projects being developed by the National Park Service.

Including the Ohio projects there are 10 land use and six recreational projects in the region.

The latest report shows that 57,764 acres have already been purchased for all recreational and agricultural projects in the five states mentioned. Approximately 4,000 men now are at work on these agricultural projects.

Recent newspaper stories quoted Rexford G. Tugwell, RA administrator, as saying that the 9,000,000 acres now under option represent less than one-tenth of the poor farm land in the nation suggested by land experts for public purchase — indicating that this work is barely beginning if it is to have widespread and lasting remedial effect.

The 210 land acquisition projects in the nation include 141 designated as agricultural demonstration areas and which now employ approximately 55,000 workmen, largely from relief rolls. The Ohio projects are included in this group.

Approximately three-fourths of the land is being restored to some kind of use, such as forestry, grazing, or a combination of these or other uses as dictated by the nature of the land and the needs of the community.

Development of public recreation areas, largely through the cooperation of the National Park Service, is another large activity. Forty-two recreational projects are now being turned over to the park service.

FARM NEWS

Brief Items of Interest to Pickaway Farmers

Dairymen who make the highest income from their herds plan their business so that the volume of milk production is maintained in fall and winter months when prices are normally best.

A short course in dairy husbandry will be given by the animal husbandry department at Ohio State University, January 4 to March 6. Feeding, milk production, testing milk, and judging are part of the subjects covered in the course.

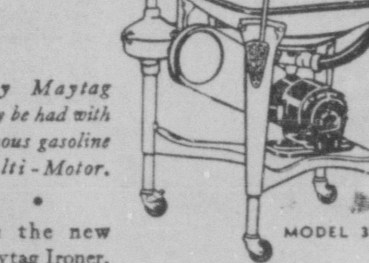

With the exception of two years in the past 25, the farm value of the United States potato crop was below average when the total yield was above average and the farm value was higher when the crop was below average in size.

A boardwalk 40 feet wide, one inch thick, and extending from the earth to the moon would require about the same amount of lumber to build as is used annually in the United States. One cellulose plastic derived from wood has 25,000 different uses. Annual lumber sales in the nation are approximately 50 billion board feet.

Turkeys which are not well finished in time for the Thanksgiving market should be held and prepared for sale later than disposed of this month for less than average market prices. Poultry specialists at Ohio State University believe the shortage of feedstuffs in western states will bring vice for completion. Wildlife conservation, including migratory waterfowl refuges planned in cooperation with the Bureau of Biological Survey, and Indian rehabilitation, under supervision of the Department of the Interior, are being carried on in 63 projects.

FARMER LOANS NEAR 4 BILLION

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—The United States today, by its system of agricultural financing, is solving one of the stumbling blocks since the beginning of civilization, declares Richard W. Young, general counsel of the Farm Credit Administration.

"The problem only became acute in the United States about 1890," says Young. "Prior to that there was no difficulty because as soon as the fertility of the soil on which a farmer was settled became exhausted, all he had to do was to move westward and resettle on virgin land."

"However, by 1930, the supply of this virgin land was nearly exhausted, and the farmer was forced to purchase additional land. He had caught up with the problem, or rather the problem had caught up with him, which has faced every race since the beginning of civilization."

Interest Up To 30 Per Cent

When the financing of farmers was begun along about 1890, Young says, the program was especially acute. The financing was done almost exclusively by small banks and individuals, and their rates of interest ran from 20 to 30 per cent.

"The Farm Loan Act of 1916, however, and its amendment in 1923," he points out, "brought into existence three kinds of banks for farmers—The Federal Land Banks, the Joint Stock Land Banks and Intermediate Credit Banks. The supervision of all of these was vested in a Farm Loan Board."

Farmers Own Bank Stock "Twelve district banks, each with capital of $750,000, were established in 1917. The stock is almost wholly owned by the farmers who borrow funds for advance on crops and produce. There are now about 4,600 National Farm Loan Associations in the United States."

Young explains that the money dispensed by the Intermediate Credit Banks and the Federal Land Banks is not government or taxpayer or treasury money, but money obtained from Federal Land Bank and Intermediate Credit Bank ventures.

Since the establishment three years ago of the Farm Credit Administration, Young declared, loans have been made in excess of $3,704,000,000. In California alone, loans have totaled $129,000,000, while the western district made loans in Utah, California, Arizona and Nevada for a total of $220,000,000.

New York architects are said to be working on plans for several glass office buildings.

WHALING TO AID SCIENCE GROWS

CHICAGO (UP)—Dr. E. M. K. Gelling, University of Chicago pharmacologist, is leading a new enterprise of "big" business — he collects and distributes organic parts of whales.

Interested principally in pituitary gland research, Dr. Gelling undertook his first whaling expedition three years ago. Immensity of whale glands adapted them particularly to the demands of his experimentation, and he cruised to Rose Harbor, 450 miles north of Vancouver, where his successes brought orders from biology research workers in 12 leading universities.

On his 1936 expedition, undertaken this past summer, Dr. Gelling, with Dr. Robert Walmsley, Edinburg University anatomist, achieved singular success in sighting a large, hump-backed whale within five miles of the port base.

turned to port, enabling him to "pickle" the desired organs in fixative less than three hours after the killing. Whaling company officials pronounced the feat unique in whaling history.

Through his experience, Dr. Gelling is able to make illuminating disclosures of this most gigantic of "fishing" enterprises. French-Canadian fishermen seek as their prey the small, white whale, he says, hunting from canoes with small harpoons and shotguns. They differ from larger whaling expeditions in that they return immediately to their home base after a catch.

BOOKS RELAYED BY PACKHORSES

PITTSBURGH (UP)—In parts of Kentucky, mounted librarians carry books and magazines to hill farmers who ordinarily would have no reading matter. At a desk in her Pittsburgh home sits Mrs. Malcolm McLeod, key figure in this unusual packhorse library service.

Several years ago, Mrs. McLeod, wife of a Carnegie Tech English professor, started collecting books from her friends and sending them to hospitals in the Pittsburgh district.

Gradually, almost single-handedly, she enlarged the scope of her work. She sent books and periodicals to mountain villages in the Far East and to educational centers in Labrador. Most of the publications went to the mountains and there, particularly, her work has prospered.

Wide Appeal Made
Mrs. McLeod appeals by letters and through newspapers for needed books. She receives many of the contributions at her home but suggests that it is more helpful if the books or magazines are sent directly to London, Ky.

At London, headquarters of the packhorse library service, the books are sorted, mended and loaded into knapsacks. The mounted librarians, traveling on mules and horses, visit out-of-the-way homes in the mountains, exchange books with readers who have finished the material taken to them earlier.

Schoolhouses Are Center
Sometimes, they leave the books at schoolhouses, which serve as district libraries.

Mrs. McLeod said that even those who can't read are eager for books and magazines. They like the pictures or like to have members of their families or neighbors read to them.

Librarians reported to Mrs. McLeod that the demand is greatest for the Bible. The mountain folk also ask for cook books, health articles and religious papers.

A 7-year-old boy with an injured back told a librarian: "Learn me to read and then I won't be lonesome any more."

NEW CALENDAR URGED BY U.S. CABINET HEADS

Thirteen - Month System Is Recommended to State Department

WASHINGTON, Nov 23 (UP)—A reformation of the calendar is being advocated by the central statistical board, directed by Secretaries Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Henry A. Wallace, Daniel C. Roper and Frances Perkins.

The proposed plan is to divide the year into 13 months of 28 days each, the months to begin on Sunday and end on Saturday regularly. To give longer weekends, all holidays would fall on Monday. At the end of every year there would be a "year day" or extra holiday to make the right number of days in a year. In leap years a mid-year extra holiday would be added.

The subject of calendar reform first came before the board when it was asked by the State Department to make a study of the questions involved and to submit a report which could be used in formulating the policy of the U. S. Government.

Recommendations Drawn Up
The board has been studying the plan for more than a year and now has a definite report to make to the State Department.

The report favors the calendar reform.

It recommends:
1.—That the United States send representatives to any meeting called by the League of Nations on the subject.

2.—That the United States support proposals for the calling of an international convention on calendar reform.

Widespread Support Cited
The report cites the "increasing advocacy of calendar reform in this country" and the "widespread support for a special international convention to discuss the matter thoroughly." It explains that the idea is viewed sympathetically by business interests and agencies of the Federal government dealing with statistics.

Other countries, including England, France, Belgium, Germany, Japan, Holland, Italy and Spain, are aligning themselves with the movement.

Those in favor of the reform have suggested that the new calendar begin on Jan. 1, 1939, when falls on Sunday. Under the present calendar this does not occur again until 1950.

HONOLULU HUB IN AIR SERVICE

HONOLULU (UP)—At the request of Gov. Joseph B. Poindexter, Robert Campbell, district airport advisor of the department of commerce, has arrived from Washington to make preliminary plans for the creation of a $1,000,000 governmental airport here for the service of all trans-Pacific and local lines.

The idea is that the airport not only should be the central "depot" for the trans-Pacific Clippers, but for new lines from the Orient, Australia and New Zealand as well as inter-island lines.

Campbell first will study all the airports throughout the territory preliminary to drafting a plan bringing them up to the standard set for other parts of America. In the meantime, it is expected that work will get underway on the new international airport proposed here.

"Due to the fact," said Campbell, "that Honolulu is destined to become one of America's most important commercial aeronautical centers because of its strategic position for trans-Pacific routes to the Orient and the Antipodes, we regard the construction of a great airport here as an ultimate necessity.

"This central mid-oceanic base would be available to all trans-Pacific commercial air services, having facilities for land and sea planes. It is only a question of time when air travel over the Pacific will increase immeasurably and with that increase will come a demand for larger and more modern facilities in Honolulu." Campbell said federal, territorial and army agencies are working in close connection of the project.

In their study of earth science, geologists cling to two fundamental principles: 1. The age of the earth is very great; 2. In the processes of evolution at present may be sought illustrations of most of the changes of the past.

HONOLULU HUB
IN AIR SERVICE

HONOLULU (UP)—At the request of Gov. Joseph B. Poindexter, Robert Campbell, district airport advisor of the department of commerce, has arrived from Washington to make preliminary plans for the creation of a $1,000,000 governmental airport here for the service of all transpacific and local lines.

The idea is that the airport not only should be the central "depot" for the transpacific Clippers, but for new lines from the Orient, Australia and New Zealand as well as inter-island lines.

Campbell first will study all the airports throughout the territory preliminary to drafting a plan bringing them up to the standard set for other parts of America. In the meantime, it is expected that work will get underway on the new international airport proposed here.

"Due to the fact," said Campbell, "that Honolulu is destined to become one of America's most important commercial aeronautical centers because of its strategic position for transpacific routes to the Orient and the Antipodes, we regard the construction of a great airport here as an ultimate necessity.

"This central mid-oceanic base would be available to all transpacific commercial air services, having facilities for land and sea planes. It is only a question of time when air travel over the Pacific will increase immeasurably and with that increase will come

SMALL COINS SCARCE

CANBERRA (UP)—The director of the Australian Royal Mint is unable to decide whether Australians are over-addicted to church going or just frugality. In any event, he cannot keep up with the demand for small coins. He has been ordered to produce 3,000,000 three-penny bits to replace those which have almost disappeared from circulation.

MURDER CHARGE FACED

Loved Mrs. Taylor Too Much to Kill Her, He Says

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 23—(UP)—Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt, jailed on a murder charge, repeated today he would like to "tell everything" he knows about the death of his fiancée, Mrs. Verne Taylor, but will wait until his attorneys approve.

Denhardt charged he has been "persecuted," that the crowd which attended his preliminary hearing last week was assembled to "make a Roman holiday" of his appearance.

"I would prefer to tell everything," he said in his jail cell where he received many week-end visitors, "but I promised my counsel I would not until the proper time."

The former lieutenant governor was arrested when he refused to testify at the inquest into the death of the attractive widow who was found dead beside the general's recently-fired gun Nov. 6. Previously free on bond, he was jailed Friday after being held for grand jury action.

Neatly dressed, apparently in good health, the general spoke freely of his love for the socially prominent Mrs. Taylor.

"I couldn't have fired the shot that killed her," he said. "I loved her too much, and we were happy together."

Denhardt said his love for Mrs. Taylor and testimony that he was not near the scene of the shooting at the time the supposedly fatal shot was fired proved his innocence.

EPOCHAL PEACE VOYAGE

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S journey to the Argentine may easily have a most significant effect upon the troubled international situation. While the immediate objective is that of establishing friendly relationships within the Western Hemisphere, Europe is certain to watch the proceedings with the utmost interest, and it is possible that the developments at Buenos Aires may be regarded as a criterion suitable for general adoption.

Though the President has not expressed himself in these terms, it is to be assumed that he attaches great importance to the projected Pan-American conference. Otherwise, he would not take the time and trouble, while domestic problems of major scope confront the nation, to make the 12,000-mile trip to South America.

The next four years are certain to call for real statesmanship at Washington. Many observers believe that Europe stands at the threshold of another devastating struggle. In addition, Japan's policies in China have been such as to call forth dire forecasts concerning the trend of affairs throughout the Orient.

Mr. Roosevelt's problem will be that of maintaining a foreign policy designed to conserve the interests of peace and, at the same time, to maintain the necessities of national defense. It will be no casual task, for sinister forces have been let loose in various parts of the world, and, with more than 8,000,000 men under arms, the merest spark may at any moment let loose an encompassing explosion.

Amid this gloomy situation, the Pan-American parley looms as a beacon in the night. It promises to accentuate practicable ways and means of fostering international amity. If it is out too late it may show a war weary world suitable methods of founding the dealings of nations upon mutual understanding and friendly rivalry.

SCHUMANN-HEINK

THE voice of Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink has been stilled by death, countless thousands of Americans will mourn the loss of not only a great artist but a true patriot whose aesthetic talents were always freely bestowed. Known as "mother" to United States World War veterans because of her sustained interest in her welfare, Mme. Schumann-Heink was a woman who never permitted professional triumphs to obscure the human sympathy which is an invariable phase of character at its best.

America is the poorer as a result of the loss of this genius of the operatic and concert stage. But the memory of Schumann-Heink will linger in the mind of the populace so long as appreciation of beauty and admiration of sterling personality remain as sources of delight and inspiration.

There are two paragraphs in the annual report of President Daniel Willard of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad company that few, if any, financial writers quoted. The second of the two paragraphs is an unusual one to be written by the president of a large corporation. See for yourself. Here are the paragraphs:

"During the years from 1932 to 1935, inclusive, the Baltimore & Ohio failed to earn its full interest, fixed charges, and depreciation by $11,136,000. . . . During this same period the company secured loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Public Works Administration which, after certain payments on account of approximately $12,900,000, now aggregate $73,799,823, all in effect, for refunding purposes. After deducting $12,490,000 Baltimore & Ohio Railroad company five-year secured notes held by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, as part of the indebtedness referred to, it leaves direct obligations to governmental agencies of $60,309,823, with maturities extending over the period to Aug. 1, 1939.

"At a time when because of financial conditions incident to the depression it was practically impossible to market new securities, the aid and consideration extended by these agencies of the government were of inestimable value to this and many other companies having important obligations maturing. Having in mind the exceptional business and financial conditions during these last several years it is not difficult to visualize what might have happened in the railroad and business world but for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and the intelligent and helpful manner in which its activities have been directed."

WONDERFUL STRIDES

President Willard's report brings out, too, the wonderful strides being made in the development of new railroad motive power. For the B. & O. has ordered two 3,600-horsepower Diesel locomotives for use, without charge, between Washington and Chicago. That is "as nothing" to the Diesels that now operate between Chicago and Los Angeles without charge.

Yet it was merely three years ago that the B. & O. put into service an experimental Diesel between Washington and New York. It was of 1,800-horsepower. The Union Pacific and Burlington began developing larger horsepower—namely Union Pacific and Santa Fe joined the procession. But not all roads favor Diesels. FDR FORGOT WHEEL-CHAIR

WASHINGTON—Preparations for the President's take-off to Buenos Aires were made with infinite care. The Union Station was thoroughly policed. All the track between Washington and Charleston was inspected and patrolled.

The President's baggage was carefully packed so that he would have morning for his speech in Buenos Aires, evening dress for his banquets with Presidents of Brazil and Argentina.

In his portfolio were packed treaties and proposals to be made at the Pan-American Conference, reports from various Cabinet officers, detailed studies of projects to be taken up when Congress opens.

No item was overlooked to provide for the President's work and comfort on the long trip. But when he got to the station the train did not pull out.

Roosevelt got aboard, waved his hand, smiled good-bye from the rear platform. But nothing happened. Almost twenty minutes passed and the train did not move.

Reason: The President's aides had overlooked the one thing indispensable when he travels, his wheel-chair.

So the train waited while a station wagon chased to the White House and back, stowed the chair safely in the baggage car.

PRESIDENTIAL READING

Here is the way the books were selected for the President's reading on the South American trip.

Chief Yeoman Charles K. Claunch of the Navy got two book lists. One was a list of current best sellers, the other a list of all recent detective stories. Yeoman Claunch made a careful selection of the best sellers, but made no selection of the detective stories. He ordered them all.

"The President is very fond of detective stories," explains Claunch, "and you have to get all the latest ones to be sure to have something he hasn't read."

Total number of books ordered was 100.

NOTE—Indicative of what may be in store regarding a Constitutional Amendment and the Supreme Court was the fact that the President took with him two books by Morris Ernst, "The Ultimate Power."

MYSTERY PASSENGER

Mystery has surrounded the name of Eddie Gallagher, listed as a member of the President's party on the cruiser Indianapolis.

Everybody knew about the other members of the party—son James Roosevelt, the naval and military aides, and the personal physician—but Eddie Gallagher remained a mystery.

Answer to the mystery is that James Roosevelt had a friendly impulse and asked his father if he might bring along a pal.

Gallagher is a 24-year-old Boston lad who helped James in the recent Massachusetts campaign. He suffered an injury to his leg, had to drop out of the campaign for an operation.

James wanted to reward Eddie with a recuperative holiday and give him a chance to see strange far-away places. Space is at a premium on the Indianapolis. But the President OK'd his son's request.

Asked who Mr. Gallagher is, James replies, "He is my secretary."

Jack Reid, who has just undergone the mysterious murder of Sir Henry Severing in the chapel of his ancestral abbey, is a hard-boiled man who has lived by his wits since he left an orphanage in the chapel to steal a valuable sword cross. Reid had no means of identifying Sir Henry's slayer and could not raise an alarm for fear of betraying himself. James, the Severing butler, finds his master missing from his bedroom next morning and reports the fact to Lady Hilda Severing, who is chatting with Eric Colindale, agent for the estate, in her sitting room. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 4

ERIC COLINDALE occupied an ambiguous position in the household. In one sense he was a paid servant like James, being just an agent, but in another sense he was anything but a servant, if the rumors that were exploited in the servants' hall had any foundation of truth.

Of Sir Henry he saw little, merely receiving general orders with regard to the estate from the baronet, who spent most of his time in his study and seldom went out.

But of Lady Severing he saw a great deal, and this was reported to be the cause of trouble with her husband.

Between Colindale and James there was no love lost, for the butler was quite firm in claiming that all that appertained to the interior of the house fell within his province, and would brook no interference.

The two men searched the whole place, from attic to cellar, but there was no trace of the missing man, nor any signs of burglars, although James gave it as his opinion that someone might have entered the house in the night, and that Sir Henry, hearing a noise, had gone to ascertain the cause, and met with disaster. The chapel door was locked, but Colindale remarked with a sneer that Sir Henry would have hardly gone there for a lonely vigil, or to confess his sins.

They were returning along the corridor. The ancient paving stone of the cloisters had been left when the open sides had been bricked up to form a more convenient passageway round the central court. Colindale stopped abruptly and looked at the floor.

"Hello!" he exclaimed, and pointed to a large spot of candle grease that had splashed on the stone flag.

He bent down to examine the mark, but, glancing along the corridor, saw another on which the sun through the lancet window was shining as though on glass.

"Candle grease—someone has been along here with a candle. I didn't know there was such a thing in the house." He laughed uneasily.

James spoke gravely. "Sir Henry has a pair of silver candlesticks in his study, only uses them for sealing documents."

"What on earth was he doing with a candle, when there is electric light all over the house?" Colindale asked, gazing in a perplexed manner at the stain.

"One of the candlesticks is missing," James observed quietly. "I saw that when we searched the study."

"Oh—you didn't say anything about it."

"No, I thought it likely that Sir Henry had taken it with him."

They found three spots altogether, each exactly opposite one of the narrow windows into the court.

"I must tell Lady Severing," Colindale announced shortly.

"Don't you think that we had better call the police?" James retorted.

"That will be for her ladyship to say—we can't give orders."

James bowed rather ironically and turned away to his own quarters at the back of the house.

Colindale found Lady Severing in her sitting room, where he had left her. A meal had been brought up on a tray, but remained untouched. She looked up eagerly at his entry.

"No trace whatever—we've searched the whole place."

"Eric, do you think that he could have crossed the lake?"

"You mean gone into it," the man said brutally. "That is impossible, unless of course he was helped by someone inside the house. Every window was tightly fastened, and you know that all the ground floor windows have close-fitting shutters—they were all closed."

"But what are we to do?" She moved restlessly and lighted a cigarette, though the one she had been smoking was only half consumed. "I suppose we shall have to send for the police. What a scandal that will make!"

Eric watched her closely. "There is no hurry for the moment. I will have the grounds searched thoroughly. It's my belief that he has staged this deliberately, and possibly with the connivance of James. I don't trust that man."

"You don't think that he is—dead?" Her voice dropped pitifully at the fatal word.

"Why should he be? If nothing turns up by lunch time I'll go down to the village and get the local constable here; but if we phone now it'll be all over the place at once."

"Very well, Eric; but I am dreadfully frightened. I can't touch anything to eat."

"You mustn't give way, Hilda; that'll do no good at all."

"I shall go and see the children."

"They must not be told anything."

There was no male heir, and the ancient baronetcy determined with the present baronet. His only children were identical twins—small, thin, and white-faced, lithe and active as kittens; but the blanched appearance masked a nervous vitality and quick, brilliant brains. Only the family doctor shook his head, knowing only too well the story of short-lived mothers and delicate daughters in the long line of the Severings.

The men had gone out into the world, fighters and adventurers; but the grim miasma from the lake and the thin, ghostly mist that rose from its stagnant waters had taken toll of those who lived there. The monks had built their retreat on an island in the lake in a sequestered valley, as was their custom, so that fish might be available and abundant on Fridays, and the situation had proved useful at a time when the civil war made an unfurnished house unsafe.

The doctor had insisted that their rooms should be established facing the inner court and not the lake, and they had been brightly furnished in contrast to the rest of the gloomy house. They never saw their father, except on an awful and solemn Sunday evening meal, when they were allowed to dine with their parents, and they dreaded this gloomy function.

Lately, increasing illness of the baronet had caused these invitations to cease, to their immense joy.

Lady Severing, empty-headed and vain, had never understood her children, or attempted to do so. Her husband, as girls instead of a boy had been produced, had shown his disapproval by treating them as redundancies and her as blame-worthy for this catastrophe. He had longed passionately for an heir to the ancient title.

Breakfast was over, and Joan and Marian had listlessly begun their lessons when Lady Severing entered. Each held up a cold face to be kissed perfunctorily, while Sylvia rose staidly and bowed in an old-fashioned manner. Her face was white and distressed-looking, and her eyes had a scared look.

"How are they getting on with their lessons?" Lady Severing asked, for the sake of saying something.

"They find it rather trying during this hot weather," the governess answered.

"I think perhaps it might be a good thing to take them out today, give them some fresh air; and you can take a picnic basket with you."

Two pairs of inquiring eyes were fixed on their mother gravely in question.

"Have they found father yet?" Joan asked fearfully.

"What do you mean, child?" Lady Severing looked angrily at Sylvia.

"I am sorry to have to tell your ladyship that when Susan brought in the children's breakfast she told us that Sir Henry was missing and could not be found."

"Pooh! Mere gossip, and there is no question of my husband being missing. He has merely gone for the day. I shall speak severely to James about it."

"Is that why you wanted us to go for a picnic?" Joan persisted.

"Don't be impertinent, child!" Lady Severing said. "Come on now, put your books away, and get ready."

As Lady Severing shut the door behind her she heard Marian exclaim, "Perhaps we may catch him. What a lark!"

Colindale was out in the grounds with the gardeners. They had carefully gone round the edge of the lake, examining the bank minutely for marks of any sort. By climbing into the bushes, and then wading along till the bank was firm, Reid had obliterated any traces, and the search was vain.

The reddy, quiet waters gave no sign, and the dark walls rising from slimy green bases were silent and menacing. The gardens and grounds yielded no clue, and Colindale was returning to the Abbey to report his failure when a cheery voice greeted him from behind.

Women Lose Their Sight by Use of Lash Dye

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
WHEN, IN 1933, we heard the news report of a woman who had used a certain cosmetic on her eyelashes with the result that she got such an inflammation of the eye-ball that she went blind, one would have thought that the publicity attached to this would warn manufacturers against putting out any dye which contains para-phenylene-diamine or any aniline ingredient similar to it. When, in the spring of 1934, it was reported that there was another similar case, one would have thought that this certainly was a final warning.

But apparently not, for we have had another report within the last year of a young woman in St. Louis who lost her eyesight after the use of a hair dye made by a manufacturing company of St. Louis, to touch up her eyelashes.

The story is that she had just completed a six-week course as a beauty operator, and the night she completed it she got fixed up to go out with her boy friend and celebrate the event. The boy friend had objected to the use of mascara, so someone in the shop persuaded her to use the hair dye on her eyelashes. The astonishing thing is that the package which the company put out has a caution as follows: "This product contains an aniline derivative or an amino compound which may cause skin irritation on certain individuals, and a preliminary test according to accompanying directions should first be made." On the reverse side it says "Hair dye, tobacco, may not be used by everyone. Read remarks on page 4 of enclosed blue circular before using this preparation. It must not be used as an eyelash or eyebrow dye."

Effective Warning

The warning might be more effective if it said, "This preparation may make you blind."

I understand that the first victim of 1933 has had an operation on her eyes so that she can barely distinguish light from darkness. I understand that the last woman mentioned above has also had an operation, and that in spite of her dreadful experience she is a very good sport about it, saying it is all her own fault, and that she should have told the boy friend that he would have to like mascara; that while she was being operated on, in spite of the pain, she kept saying, "Well, this is what you get for being such a chump!"

At any rate, there it is for the warning of anyone who might be tempted to touch up the eyelashes with a strange ingredient.

All of this should be interesting to the congressional committees who are shortly to pass on the new pure food, drug and cosmetic bill, and to the gentleman, who, in defending the cosmetic manufacturers, said that after all, there were only two people who lost their sight. Just two!

EPOCHAL PEACE VOYAGE

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S journey to the Argentine may easily have a most significant effect upon the troubled international situation. While the immediate objective is that of establishing friendly relationships within the Western Hemisphere, Europe is certain to watch the proceedings with the utmost interest, and it is possible that the developments at Buenos Aires may be regarded as a criterion suitable for general adoption.

Though the President has not expressed himself in these terms, it is to be assumed that he attaches great importance to the projected Pan-American conference. Otherwise, he would not take the time and trouble, while domestic problems of major scope confront the nation, to make the 12,000-mile trip to South America.

The next four years are certain to call for real statesmanship at Washington. Many observers believe that Europe stands at the threshold of another devastating struggle. In addition, Japan's policies in China have been such as to call forth dire forecasts concerning the trend of affairs throughout the Orient.

Mr. Roosevelt's problem will be that of maintaining a foreign policy designed to conserve the interests of peace and, at the same time, to maintain the necessities of national defense. It will be no casual task, for sinister forces have been let loose in various parts of the world, and, with more than 8,000,000 men under arms, the merest spark may at any moment let loose an encompassing explosion.

STOCK INFLATION

Sepaking of inflation—business corporations themselves are doing a great deal of it.

When corporations call in bonds and other liens and give stock in exchange, they not only are adding to the supply of stock, but they are reducing the equity in the business of each share of stock outstanding.

It is true that corporations are reducing their interest bearing debt. But, sometimes, an interest bearing debt is a heavy reminder that there is an obligation. Paying out money in dividends, to save interest and taxes, may prove to be a dissipation costly to the stockholders in the end.

The constant flow of new stock into the market also is adding to the burden of the spiral—as it did in 1929.

This plus credit buying by millions of all sorts of articles, plus an unbalanced national budget, plus a vastly expanded credit base, is causing some of the conservative gray beards to head for their shelter-proof vaults. Conservative bonds are in tremendous demand.

James bowed rather ironically and turned away to his own quarters at the back of the house. Colindale found Lady Severinge in her sitting room, where he had left her. A meal had been brought up on a tray, but remained untouched. She looked up eagerly at his entry.

"No trace whatever—we've searched the whole place."

"Eric, do you think that he could have crossed the lake?"

"You mean gone into it," the man said brutally. "That is impossible, unless of course he was helped by someone inside the house. Every window was tightly fastened, and you know that all the ground floor windows have close-fitting shutters—they were all closed."

"But what are we to do?" She moved restlessly and lighted a cigarette, though the one she had been smoking was only half consumed. "I suppose we shall have to send for the police. What a scandal that will make!"

Eric watched her closely. "There is no hurry for the moment. I will have the grounds searched thoroughly. It's my belief that he has staged this deliberately, and possibly with the connivance of James. I don't trust that man."

"You don't think that he is—dead?" Her voice dropped piteously at the fatal word.

"Why should he be? If nothing turns up by lunch time I'll go down to the village and get the local constable here; but if we phone now it'll be all over the place at once."

"Very well, Eric; but I am dreadfully frightened. I can't touch anything to eat."

"You mustn't give way, Hilda; that'll do no good at all."

"I shall go and see the children," she said. "They must not be told anything."

There was no male heir, and the ancient baronetcy determined with the present baronet. His only children were identical twins—small, thin, and white-faced, lithe and active as kittens; but the blanched appearance masked a nervous vitality and quick, brilliant brains. Only the family doctor shook his head, knowing only too well the story of short-lived mothers and delicate daughters in the long line of the Severinges. The men had gone out into the world, fighters and adventurers; but the grim miasma from the lake and the thin, ghostly mist that rose from its stagnant waters had taken toll of those who lived there. The monks had built their retreat on an island in the lake in a sequestered valley, as was their custom, so that fish might be available and abundant on Fridays, and the situation had proved unsafe.

The doctor had insisted that their rooms should be established facing the inner court and not the lake, and they had been brightly furnished in contrast to the rest of the gloomy house. They never saw their father, except on an awful and solemn Sunday evening meal, when they were allowed to dine with their parents, and they dreaded this gloomy function.

Lately, increasing illness of the baronet had caused these invitations to cease, to their immense joy.

Lady Severinge, empty-headed and vain, had never understood her children, or attempted to do so. Her husband, as girls instead of a boy had been produced, had shown his disapproval by treating them as redundancies and her as blame-worthy for this catastrophe. He had longed passionately for an heir to the ancient title.

Breakfast was over, and Joan and Marian had listlessly begun their lessons when Lady Severinge entered. Each held up a cold face to be kissed perfunctorily, while Sylvia rose staidly and bowed in an old-fashioned manner. Her face was white and distressed-looking, and her eyes had a scared look.

"How are they getting on with their lessons?" Lady Severinge asked, for the sake of saying something.

"They find it rather trying during this hot weather," the governess answered.

"I think perhaps it might be a good thing to take them out today, give them some fresh air; and you can take a picnic basket with you."

Two pairs of inquiring eyes were fixed on their mother gravely in question.

"Have they found father yet?" Joan asked fearfully.

"What do you mean, child?" Lady Severinge looked angrily at Sylvia.

"I am sorry to have to tell your ladyship that when Susan brought in the children's breakfast she told us that Sir Henry was missing and could not be found."

"Poo! Mere gossip, and there is no question of my husband being missing. He has merely gone for the day. I shall speak severely to James about it."

"Is that why you wanted us to go for a picnic?" Joan persisted.

"Don't be impertinent, child!" Lady Severinge said. "Come on now, put your books away, and get ready."

As Lady Severinge shut the door behind her she heard Marian exclaim, "Perhaps we may catch him. What a lark!"

Colindale was out in the grounds with the gardeners. They had carefully gone round the edge of the lake, examining the bank minutely for marks of any sort.

By climbing into the bushes, and then wading along till the bank was firm, Reid had obliterated any traces, and the search was vain. The reedy, quiet waters gave no sign, and the dark old walls rising from slimy green bases were silent and menacing. The gardens and grounds yielded no clue, and Colindale was returning to the Abbey to report his failure when a cheery voice greeted him from behind.

Women Lose Their Sight by Use of Lash Dye

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WHEN, IN 1933, we heard the news report of a woman who had used a certain cosmetic on her eyelashes with the result that she got such an inflammation of the eyeball that she went blind, one would have thought that the publicity attached to this would have warned manufacturers against putting out any dye which contains para-phenylene-diamine or any aniline ingredient similar to it. When, in the spring of 1934, it was reported that there was another similar case, one would have thought that this certainly was a final warning.

But apparently not, for we have had another report within the last year of a young woman in St. Louis who lost her eyesight after the use of a hair dye made by a manufacturing company of St. Louis, to touch up her eyelashes.

The story is that she had just completed a six-week course as a beauty operator, and the night she completed it she got fixed up to go out with her boy friend and celebrate the event. The boy friend had objected to the use of mascara, so someone in the shop persuaded her to use the hair dye on her eyelashes. The astonishing thing is that the package which the company put out has a caution as follows: "This product contains an aniline derivative or an amino compound which may cause skin irritation on certain individuals, and a preliminary test according to accompanying directions should first be made." On the reverse side it says "Hair dyes, like tobacco, may not be used by everyone. Read remarks on page 4 of enclosed blue circular before using this preparation. It must not be used as an eyelash or eyebrow dye."

Effective Warning

The warning might be more effective if it said, "This preparation may make you blind."

I understand that the first victim of 1933 has had an operation on her eyes so that she can barely distinguish light from darkness. I understand that the last woman mentioned above has also had an operation, and that in spite of her dreadful experience she is a very good sport about it, saying it is all her own fault, and that she should have told the boy friend that he would have to like mascara; that while she was being operated on, in spite of the pain, she kept saying, "Well, this is what you get for being such a chump."

At any rate, there it is for the warning of anyone who might be tempted to touch up the eyelashes with a strange ingredient.

All of this should be interesting to the congressional committees who are shortly to pass on the new pure food, drug and cosmetic bill, and to the gentleman, who, in defending the cosmetic manufacturers, said that after all, there were only two people who lost their sight. Just two!

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet", "Indigestion and Constipation", "Reducing and Gaining", "Infant Feeding", "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes", "Feminine Hygiene", and "The Care of the Hair and Skin".

NOTRE DAME RULES MIDDLEWEST GRID AFTER DEFEAT OF NORTHWESTERN

Notre Dame Routs Wildcats 26 to 6!

THAT rosy vision of a national championship for Northwestern—Big Ten winners—vanished at South Bend Ind., today before an inspired Notre Dame team that took advantage of every opening to pile up a 26 to 6 victory over the hitherto unbeaten Wildcats. Bob Wilke, Notre Dame half, is shown as he got off on a 35-yard run that ended behind the Northwestern goal line in the first quarter.

WILKE IS STAR AS IRISH ROLL UP 26 MARKERS

Minnesota and Ohio State Finish in Tie For Big Ten Title

WISCONSIN FALLS 0 TO 24

Iowa Surprised Temple Owls in 25-0 Upset

CHICAGO, Nov. 23 — (UP) — Notre Dame's fighting Irish, beaten twice and criticized by many, ruled the middlewest once more today after crushing Northwestern's national title hopes in one of the year's greatest upsets.

With a four-touchdown assault against a supposedly invincible team, the Irish fired their own answer to the persistent question—what's wrong with Notre Dame? The score was Irish 26, Northwestern 6.

Bob Wilke, Notre Dame left halfback, stunned the Wildcats with two touchdowns from more than 30 yards out in the first half. The alert Ramblers scored again after Don Heap fumbled a punt on his own three-yard line and once more on an 88-yard march late in the game.

Wisconsin Believed
Minnesota ended its season by whipping Wisconsin on 24 points scored in the first half. The Gophers raced away to a long lead on a field-goal by Horace Bell, a pass from Andy Uram to Bud Wilkinson for 48 yards, a 64-yard run with an intercepted pass by Larry Buhler and Uram's 49-yard run over left guard. Wisconsin's only threat was halted in the second period, when the Gophers intercepted a pass in the end zone.

The victory earned Minnesota a tie for second place with Ohio State, which moved into the tie by defeating Michigan, 21 to 0 at Columbus.

Purdue and Indiana, with a chance to share in a triple tie for second place, tied 20 to 20 and dropped to third place. Purdue, which led at the start, was forced to come from behind to reach the flying Hoosiers. Cecil Isbell threw the three touchdown passes for the Boilermakers.

Illinois clinched the top position in the lower bracket by defeating Chicago, 18 to 7, with two quick touchdowns in the fourth period. Trailing 7 to 6, the fiery Illini marched 67 yards for one touchdown and produced the other after blocking a punt.

Iowa finished its disappointing season with a rush, upsetting Temple 25 to 0 at Philadelphia. Bush Lamb, who scored twice, and Oze Simmons, star negro back, completely baffled Pop Warner's Owls with their sweeping runs.

About This and That In Many Sports

Kipke Disgusted

It's been a long while since the janitor has seen a football coach so angry as was Harry Kipke, member of the Michigan last Saturday at the conclusion of his team's 0-21 defeat at the hands of the Bucks. Kipke rounded up as many of the arbiters as he could find, and told them plenty about rulings he thought decidedly unfair to his Wolverines. Mr. Kipke, it seemed, could have kicked on the field judge's ruling that Wasyluk was over for a touchdown, although he fought the corner of the field and might have been outside, and he could have contested Bill Booth's field goal which Captain Mat Patanelli declared was east of the goal post. ***

Both In Position

However, Field Judge Hugel was on top the play when Shippery Nick went over and could

SANTA CLARA 11 ONLY UNBEATEN MAJOR OUTFIT

NEW YORK, Nov. 23—(UP)—Little Santa Clara stood alone today as the nation's only undefeated, united major football eleven after a week-end in which the favorites fell like autumn leaves.

The broncos registered their seventh consecutive victory in a Sunday night game, defeating Loyola of Los Angeles, 13 to 6.

Defeat of Northwestern and Marquette Saturday left the mythical national title situation up in the air. The weak schedule of Santa Clara hardly will gain them national recognition by the so-called experts.

hardly have missed, while Referee John Schommer was standing behind Booth when he booted, and it is not likely Schommer would intentionally call a play wrong. ***

Cage Drills Start

Cage practice starts at the high school this evening with Coach Jack Landrum striving for a winning combination with only one letter-man in the roster—That's Don Henry. There is a misunderstanding concerning where the five home games will be played—Principal E. E. Reger has a contract with the Athletic Club for the C.A.C. gym, but fight promoters say the ring will not be torn down until the county tournament. ***

Guesses 77 Percent

The old guessing percentage was fixed at 77 Saturday with three misses recorded in the list of predictions. They were Iowa and Temple, Baylor and Southern Methodist, and Wayne and Muskingum, the janitor picked the last-named team in all three cases—Three ties were listed, but those are counted out in the final reckoning. They were Fordham and Georgia, Purdue and Indiana, and Akron and Mt. Union. ***

10 Were Correct

Correct predictions were Ohio over Michigan, Notre Dame over Northwestern, Minnesota over Wisconsin, Illinois over Chicago, Ohio U. over John Carroll, Toledo over Otterbein, Wooster over Oberlin, Baldwin-Wallace over Louisville, Iowa State over Drake, California over Stanford. ***

BABE RISKO ASKS RIGHT TO FIGHT JIMMY McLARNIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 23—(UP)—Seeking vengeance for an upset pal, Babe Risko of Syracuse, former middleweight champion, has challenged Jimmy McLarnin to a 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden.

Risko, who recently upset New York's sensational knockout artist, Harry Balsamo, said he is determined to get McLarnin into the ring with him to avenge his friend, Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers, a bad beating at the Garden Friday night in a non-title match. Ambers of Herkimer, N. Y., and Risko are buddies. ***

MacDONALD AND WOLFE FAVORED FOR CAPTAINCY

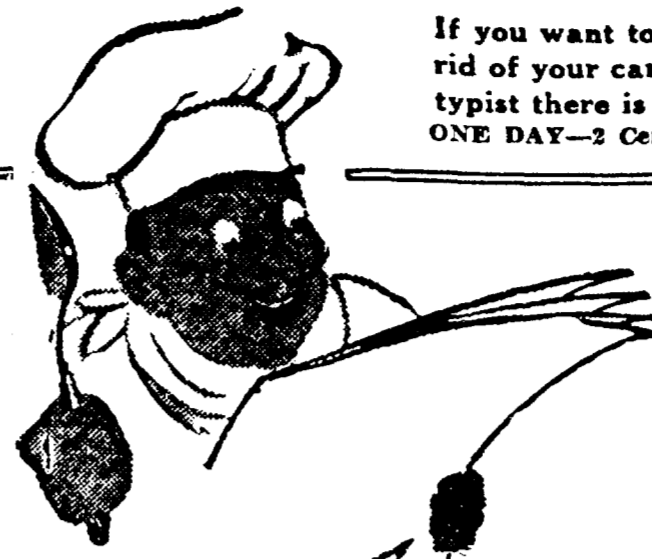

COLUMBUS, Nov. 23—(UP)—The captain of the 1937 Ohio State football team will be chosen and monogram awards made tonight at the annual "Appreciation Dinner" given for the grid-ders by the Athletic Department. The choice for a leader was believed to lie between Jim McDonald, husky Springfield fullback, and Ralph Wolfe, lanky Youngstown center. McDonald was favored slightly in the forecasts.

Former captains of Buck football teams were the guests of Athletic Director L. W. St. John yesterday.

Twenty three former captains attended the affair. Paul M. Lincoln, captain of the 1890 team which was the first to play a regular schedule, was the guest of honor. Lincoln is now on the faculty of Corneyn University.

The third place Detroit Lions came from behind to lick the Chicago Cardinals, 14 to 7, and the Boston Redskins, only eastern team to register a victory, downed the Brooklyn Dodgers, 30 to 6. The idle Pittsburgh Pirates regained possession of first place

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—(UP)— Seeking vengeance for an upstate pal, Babe Risko of Syracuse, former middleweight champion, has challenged Jimmy McLarnin to a 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden. Risko, who recently upset New York's sensational knockout artist, Harry Balsamo, said he is determined to get McLarnin into the ring with him to avenge his friend, Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers. McLarnin gave Ambers a bad beating at the Garden Friday night in a non-title match. Ambers of Herkimer, N. Y., and Risko are buddies.

MacDONALD AND WOLFE FAVORED FOR CAPTAINCY

COLUMBUS, Nov. 23.—(UP)— The captain of the 1937 Ohio State football team will be chosen and monogram awards made tonight at the annual "Appreciation Dinner" given for the grid-ders by the Athletic Department. The choice for a leader was believed to lie between Jim McDonald, husky Springfield fullback, and Ralph Wolfe, lanky Youngstown center. McDonald was favored slightly in the forecasts. Former captains of Buck football teams were the guests of Athletic Director L. W. St. John yesterday. Twenty three former captains attended the affair. Paul M. Lincoln, captain of the 1890 team which was the first to play a regular schedule, was the guest of honor. Lincoln is now on the faculty of Corneyn University.

PACKERS, BEARS REMAIN IN TIE FOR LOOP LEAD

BY UNITED PRESS 6 PT.
Battle for leadership of the western division of the National Football league remained deadlocked between the Green Bay Packers and the Chicago Bears today as the teams went into the last lap of the season. Both clubs won again over eastern opponents yesterday to keep their records identical with nine victories and one loss. The Packers scored three touchdowns, a field goal and a safety to whip the New York Giants, 26 to 14. The Bears romped to a 28 to 7 win over the Philadelphia Eagles. The third place Detroit Lions came from behind to lick the Chicago Cardinals, 14 to 7, and the Boston Redskins, only eastern team to register a victory, downed the Brooklyn Dodgers, 30 to 6. The idle Pittsburgh Pirates regained possession of first place in the eastern division because of the Giants' loss. In the American league, the leading Boston club stopped Rochester, 13 to 10, and the New York Yankees took a 15 to 7 decision over the Cleveland Rams.

SCOTT'S SCRAPBOOK

CONTRACT BRIDGE

A PARK LANE HAND

A VERY interesting deal was made last Saturday evening, at the Park Lane Bridge club, in a duplicate match, giving all sorts of scores. Against perfect defense there could be made: 3-Spades, 3-Clubs doubled or 4-Diamonds. Neither side was vulnerable. West dealt, and bid 1-Heart at all tables. One East player made the sad mistake of redoubling 3-Clubs, doubled, forcing South to bid 3-Spades. By bad defense on the part of East, South made two overtricks, giving a top score.

North will be in a box. He must not lead the Ace of hearts, as he can see that dummy will ruff it. A trump lead will cost a trick, as it will give declarer one trick over his contract. The only reasonable lead will be a spade, as the discard of a winning diamond by dummy can do the declaring side no good. Have declarer ruff with his 10, then lead his Ace of clubs, followed by a diamond. Before the dummy decides that he will do, the seventh hand, by a spade play, except the declarer will be shown. West has only the six cards shown.

What shall North do? If he discards, declarer will lead his J of clubs, forcing North to win with his Q. Dummy will hold a long trump and established diamonds, so that North can make only his two high clubs, regardless of what he does. The same situation will confront North if he ruffs the diamond. It's K of clubs will be good for a fourth trick, but the doubled side must make its doubling 3-Clubs.

The most interesting play came at tables where 3-Clubs, doubled, was played. Of course the opening lead was the Q of spades. It held the trick. West ruffed the next spade led. As North had doubled, presumably the doubler held K-Q-X of trumps, at least. Declarer should lead off his Ace and Q of diamonds next, to force the defender strong in trumps, to ruff. The fall of the 10 of diamonds on the Ace probably means that the doubler must ruff, giving his side two tricks.

Played at clubs, there is no way to prevent North from making three trump tricks and one spade trick. Played at diamonds North can make only two club tricks and one spade trick.

man light cruiser was near Caragena when two explosions were seen aboard the loyalist cruiser Miguel De Cervantes.

Ambassadors Busy

Pablo De Azcarate, Spanish ambassador, visited Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Baron
Von Ribbentrop, German ambassador, visited Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin. It was believed both visits concerned Spanish government charges that a foreign submarine torpedoed the Miguel De Cervantes, and that Baldwin may have discussed with Von Ribbentrop the reported presence of a German cruiser near the scene of the explosions.

It was admitted for the first time today that the situation arising from the threat of the nationalists to blockade loyalist ports and the recognition of the nationalists by Italy and Germany, was grave, and pregnant with possibilities of international complications.

France and Great Britain were understood to be united in their policy.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden was believed likely to make a statement on the situation in the house of commons this afternoon.

It was reported that the decision to repel by force any attack on British merchantmen was reached at a meeting of key cabinet ministers yesterday afternoon at No. 10 Downing street, the official residence of the prime minister.

At this meeting, it was rumored, Sir Ernle Chatfield, admiral of the fleet, first sea lord and chief of naval staff, informed the cabinet ministers of the report that Italian or German submarines attacked the loyalist warships.
